Unit 1: Active and Passive Voice

Learning Objectives

• Students will identify whether a sentence is in the active or passive voice.

• Students will change simple active sentences into the passive voice.

• Students will choose the correct voice for a given situation in writing.

Key Concepts

• In the active voice, the subject does the action, as in 'Ali wrote the letter.'

• In the passive voice, the subject receives the action, as in 'The letter was written by Ali.'

• The passive voice is formed with a form of the verb 'be' plus the past participle of the main verb.

• We use the passive voice when the doer is unknown, unimportant, or clear from the context.

• In the passive voice, the doer can be left out completely, as in 'The house was built in 1990.'

Teaching Methodology (Step by Step)

1. Write 'The cat chased the mouse' on the board and ask who did the action.
2. Explain the active voice with the subject-doer idea and two more examples.
3. Rewrite the same sentences in the passive voice and show the be + past participle pattern.
4. Show the present simple, past simple and future simple passive forms in a small table.
5. Give students mixed sentences and ask them to label each one active or passive.
6. Practise changing five active sentences into passive ones together, then summarise the rules.

Classroom Activities

• Voice sort: students sort sentence cards into active and passive piles.

• Sentence swap: in pairs, students turn each other's active sentences into passive ones.

• News hunt: students find one passive sentence in a newspaper clipping and explain why the writer used it.

Assessment Questions

1. Change into the passive voice: 'The gardener waters the plants every day.'
2. Is 'The match was won by our team' active or passive? How do you know?
3. Write one sentence in the passive voice without naming the doer.

Homework

• Change five active sentences from your textbook into the passive voice.

• Write a short paragraph of four sentences about your school using the passive voice at least twice.
